

OVERVIEW

The Standard Finance System (STANFINS) is one of the Army's many legacy accounting systems being divested to the new financial management and accounting tool, the General Fund Enterprise Business System (GFEBS). The Temporary Change of Station Travel (TCS) is a key financial transaction still posting in STANFINS that prevents the system from being fully divested. Intrepid's STANFINS team led the effort to reengineer how TCS transactions are being posted to allow the full divestiture of STANFINS and move the Army one step closer to a modernized enterprise system.

APPROACH

PLAN + EXECUTE + MANAGE + DELIVER

Intrepid's STANFINS team provided expertise and support in the below areas to ensure the successful migration of TCS transactions.

- 1. Open dialogue with impacted stakeholders
- 2. Efficient business process reengineering
The team developed a comprehensive migration road map and assisted with workshops to document as-is processes, propose potential solutions, and perform fit-gap analysis. Efforts synchronized development across six systems to support migration efforts.
- 3. Collaborative solution development
The team participated in Agile solution development workshops and Program Increment planning sessions to ensure the product was delivered on time and to client specifications.
